College Instructor Learns Valuable Lessons, Too, Because of EFNEP

The EFNEP Educator recently completed a class at the local community college in Lenoir County. During the introduction lesson the GED Instructor was provided an overview of the lessons that would be taught over the coming weeks.

After mentioning the “Making Smart Breakfast Choices” lesson, the instructor of the class (which had been a partner with EFNEP for two years), stated that she never ate breakfast prior to hearing this lesson. She was very sluggish, tired and did not want to face her students every day, because every little thing they did would make her irritable. The EFNEP Educator challenged class participants (who were not eating breakfast) to eat breakfast every day for the next week and see the difference in how they felt.

The class instructor participated in the challenge (along with her students) and ate breakfast every day for the next week. She told the class that after starting to eat breakfast, she had so much more energy. She came to class each day looking forward to seeing her students and was not irritable at all.

She made the statement, “Breakfast really is the most important meal of the day and Thanks to Mrs. Teresa and EFNEP, I’ve found that to be true.” The instructor shared that now, she never goes a day without eating breakfast unless she is sick or is fasting for a doctor’s appointment.
